The Board of Variance is established by Regional District of Nanaimo Bylaw 1621 and operates independent of the Board of the Regional District of Nanaimo.
Guide to the Board of Variance (BOV) Process

What is a Board of Variance?

Section 899 of the British Columbia Local Government Act stipulates that any local government that has adopted a zoning bylaw or rural land use bylaw must establish a board of variance. The Board of Variance functions separately from the local government that established it and has its own authority under the Act.

A person may apply to the Board of Variance for an order to vary certain zoning or rural land use bylaw provisions where an applicant can adequately demonstrate, to the satisfaction of the Board, that compliance with certain bylaw provisions would cause the applicant undue hardship. A person may apply for relief of certain restrictions imposed under Section 911 of the Local Government Act with regards to legal non-conforming buildings.

The Board of Variance cannot, however, vary:

- Bylaw requirements involving land use or density (for example the number of buildings per hectare);
- Floodplain specifications;
- A registered covenant;
- Any requirements under Part 27 Local Government Act, (Heritage Conservation);
- Bylaw requirements concerning designated heritage conservation areas; or,
- Any requirements of a heritage revitalization agreement under Section 966 of the Local Government Act.

Before you apply…..

The Board of Variance application for an appeal can be acquired from Planning Department at the Regional District of Nanaimo office. It is recommended that the property owner gather as much information regarding their property and proposal as possible (e.g. legal description, drawings, and surveys). You are recommended to obtain further details and advice from the planning staff when making an application.
Board of Variance Process

Step 1 – Applicant consults with staff and obtains application

Prior to submitting your application for a variance you should contact the planning staff to review bylaws, policies and regulations, and concerning your required variance. In making your application you need to consider your local Land Use bylaw and maps, Official Community Plan, and any other applicable bylaws. Each property in the RDN area is subject to specific zoning regulations. Zoning regulations restrict such things as site coverage, building setbacks, and sets minimum parking space requirements. Certain bylaw provisions concerning density and use of the property can not be varied by a Board of Variance.

Step 2 – Submit an Application

Once you have reviewed all applicable regulations and determined your bylaw variance requirements, you must complete a Board of Variance application form and submit it to the Regional District of Nanaimo office with the applicable fees. The planning staff will be available to assist you; however you will be expected to provide the following:

- A recent State of Title indicating the owner(s) name. If applicant is an agent of the owner, the owners must sign the letter of authorization form. The State of Title Certificate will also indicate if there are any covenants or easements which may affect the proposed development. Attach copies of any covenants or easements to the application;
- A brief description of the required variance and reasons why the variance may be justified. Physical features, built features, building designs, and financial constraints may restrict your ability to fully comply with certain bylaw requirements;
- A site plan/survey plan. Your drawings should clearly indicate the required variance and the bylaw provision that is required to be varied. The site plan should be titled and to scale that can be easily reviewed, and include information regarding setbacks of all existing and proposed buildings. For a proposed variance to relax a height requirement, a building elevation plan, certified by a BC Land Surveyor, must be submitted;
- A topographical survey plan certified by a BC Land Surveyor; and,
- Professional Engineer’s Report

Step 3 – Notifying Neighbouring Properties

Staff will prepare a notice for the Board of Variance that contains the subject matter of the application, and the time and place where the application will be heard by the Board. This notice shall be provided to all owners and tenants in occupation of the subject land and adjacent lands located within 50 metres of a parcel that is the subject of the permit.
Step 4 – Board of Variance Hearing

The Board of Variance meets on the second Wednesday of each month at 4:00 p.m. in the Committee Room of the Regional District of Nanaimo located at 6300 Hammond Bay Road, Nanaimo, B.C. You should attend the hearing to present your proposal. Prior to that hearing the Board of Variance may contact you in order to carry out a site inspection of your property.

At the Board of Variance hearing, the Secretary for the Board introduces the application and states the facts that pertain to the application. The applicant is then given opportunity to describe the nature

The board of variance may order that a minor variance be permitted from the requirements of a bylaw, or that an applicant be exempted from the restrictions placed on alterations or additions to buildings and structures which are non-conforming following the hearing if:

- Undue hardship would be caused to the applicant through compliance;
- It would not result in inappropriate development of the site;
- It does not adversely affect the use and enjoyment of adjacent land;
- If it does not substantially affect the use and enjoyment of adjacent land;
- If it does not vary permitted uses and densities of the applicable bylaw; and,
- If it does not defeat the intent of the bylaw

A decision form the Board of Variance is final.
